

Individual Reflection Week 4

This week was stressful and uncoordinated. The user story I was working on took way too long and I also got stuck with a bug that we as a team could not solve.

I got to know android studio more this week which was one of my goals but I still don't know the layout and libraries as much as i would like to. To achieve this I need to broaden my coding edits but also try to implement new android studio classes.

We have been helping the other students with Github but when it comes to android studio we are all pretty much on the same level. The difference is what parts and libraries we use in Android Studio. We could potentially help other teammates with implementing these in the future.

We all have been working on the scrum board quite frequently and it seems to be working well. The only problem is the lack of experience and the fact that some user stories are much bigger than others and that we do not split the work evenly. In the future we have to be more careful and precise.

I have been coding quite a bit this week because my user story and task was very big. Too big. It took way too much time to finish which led to a few different problems like miscommunication which just resulted in spending more time fixing things which just upped the hours of work. In the future we should better prepare the user stories. To do this we have to discuss and plan better.
